Permit me, brothers and sisters, to mention briefly something that is of special concern to the Church. I refer to the rights and duties of parents in the education of their children. The Second Vatican Council clearly enunciated the Church's position: "Since parents have conferred life on their children, they have a most solemn obligation to educate their offspring. Hence, parents must be acknowledged as the first and foremost educators of their children" (Gravissimum Educationis, 3). In comparison with the educational role of all others their role is primary; it is also irreplaceable and inalienable. It would be wrong for anyone to attempt to usurp that unique responsibility. Nor should parents be penalized for choosing for their children an education according to their beliefs. (Pope John Paul II, address to Leaders of Catholic Elementary and Secondary Schools and Religious Education, National Catholic Educational Association, New Orleans, September 12, 1987)

We accept our responsibility to be the first teachers of our child (ren). We commit them to the care of Our Lady of Fatima High School to continue the education that we started at home. We accept our call to be stewards of our resources and the resources of the school community.
